

Aurora Indigenous Scholars Study Tour Symposium 2021

There's something to be said for listening to other students' experiences. At the end of the day there is only so much you can learn from a university website. The Aurora online Study Tour Symposium gave us all the chance to speak directly with people who have been in our shoes and know the ins and outs. This is so valuable. It's difficult to imagine yourself one day studying somewhere like Cambridge or Harvard until you meet the people who are just like you who have gone through the experience and thrived.

In response to COVID-19, the 2020 Study Tour went online to become Aurora's first virtual Study Tour Symposium.

In November 2021, we are planning to host a 3 day Study Tour Symposium, face to face in Sydney. The Symposium will cover meetings with universities we normally visit on the Study Tour (Berkeley, Harvard and Stanford in the US and Cambridge, London School of Economics, University of London and Oxford in the UK), including the opportunity to arrange academic meetings at these institutions in your specific area of study. Participating in Sydney will grow your network by introducing you to amazing Charlie Perkins and Roberta Sykes alumni and introduce you to the current cohort of Indigenous scholars in the US and UK who will share their study experiences and pathways. We will cover scholarship opportunities available in Australia to study overseas and host panels to discuss cultural safety, self-determination and systemic change. Ultimately, with our Indigenous mentors on hand every step of the way, the Symposium will help you make better informed decision on pathways for postgraduate opportunities overseas.

Ten years on, the Aurora Study Tour has:

- provided opportunities for over 150 talented Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to gain insights into the experience of undertaking postgraduate study at premier overseas institutions.
- seen 62 participants go on to apply to study at the universities visited, with 94% being accepted.

Dates for the Sydney Study Tour Symposium 17, 18 and 19 November, in person, in Sydney. Successful applicants will have their travel, accommodation and meals covered to participate at the Symposium. When the Study Tour is able to next visit the UK and US, successful applicants for the 2021 Sydney Study Tour Symposium will be invited to participate.

Aurora Indigenous Scholars Study Tour Symposium 2021

The Study Tour Symposium was a truly incredible week where I was lucky enough to meet both other inspiring students, supportive staff and knowledgeable people. This week has opened my eyes to the endless possibilities of studying abroad, and the fact that not only is it possible for a driven Indigenous student like myself to achieve, but it is very attainable. I am so grateful for the incredible people I have had the pleasure of meeting and connecting with during the tour, and I know that these connections will last a lifetime. Before the Study Tour Symposium, I never would have thought that studying abroad at the best universities in the world would have ever been possible. But meeting, learning from and talking with such incredible people during this week has made me realise that this is a possibility. Hearing first-hand the experiences of students and staff put into perspective that my goals are in fact a possibility; it was an amazing experience, and really made me feel I was the closest I could be to these universities without being there in person. I feel so inspired by the people around me, and I am even more driven to follow my passion and achieve my goals.
